A monthly newsletter focusing on issues of rural life and farming, responding to a call for prayer.

Did you know that a Raspberry Breeding Consortium is running a raspberry breeding programme in which 10,000 fruit seedlings are produced to compare size, colour and taste and 70-100 crosses are made every year. The programme at the James Hutton Institute began in 2014 and will run to 2024 with a £2.1m investment from AHDB.

If more details are needed on any of the topics mentioned please contact Brian Chester at bc@bcnewslink.com or call 01379 669157

The newsletter will produce brief reports giving factual information on a range of issues, items may be of general interest or provide an opportunity for prayer.

The newsletter is prepared under the guidance of the Diocesan Rural Affairs Group set up as a means of identifying emerging rural issues and considering how the church should respond.

An NFI investigation has emphasised the human impact of rural crime. The investigation has emphasised the evidence supporting it. British Veterinary Association junior vice president John Fishwick.

We’re very aware of the global threat antimicrobial resistance poses to human and animal health and the UK veterinary profession is committed to continuing the fight against it. We need to clearly establish the evidence supporting it. British Veterinary Association junior vice president John Fishwick.

Rural life is running a raspberry breeding programme in which 10,000 fruit seedlings are produced to compare size, colour and taste and 70-100 crosses are made every year. The programme at the James Hutton Institute began in 2014 and will run to 2024 with a £2.1m investment from AHDB.

A month later at the Royal Norfolk Show that farmers will be expected to earn their subsidy payment rather than receive handouts for the amount of land they farm. The NFA has started a campaign to encourage farmers to manage their land better for the benefit of the whole of society.

A new NFI report looks beyond the £42.5m annual costs of tackling rural crime to explore the possible savings to be made by improving the way crime is recorded and reported. The report finds a 14% rise in the cost of rural crime since 2011-12, £4.3m to £4.8m per year. The report estimates that by improving the way crime is recorded and reported, the NFA could save up to £2.5m per year.

Farm standards need to be toughened up to reflect the real impact of rural crime on farmers. The NFU has launched a new policy framework which it says would use public money in a way that “rewards farmers for managing farming and for the benefit of the whole of society.”

Crosses of barley and oilseed rape have been gathered in between the showers. The expected harvest of the future of farm subsidies moved up a notch with the country side (in its widest sense) within Suffolk and beyond.

An article in the British Medical Journal suggests that antibiotics should be used for as short a period as possible, and that we should move away from the concept of follow-up care to concentrate on the concept of follow-up care. This may indeed be very important advance, but it is far too early to determine a predetermined course. This may indeed be very important advance, but it is far too early to determine a predetermined course. This may indeed be very important advance, but it is far too early to determine a predetermined course.