

Thursday 2 May 2024

Bishop Martin writes...

I am immensely grateful and honoured to be serving as President of the Suffolk Agricultural Association this year, and so of the Suffolk Show, which takes place on Wednesday 29 and Thursday 30 May.

The Suffolk Show of 2015 was my induction into Suffolk life, coming just two weeks after my consecration as bishop. It was the perfect way to learn not just about farming in Suffolk, but about a whole range of organisations, activities, and institutions and people - that make this such a fabulous county.

County shows like the Suffolk Show, which was first held in 1832, started out as occasions for farmers to exchange information and experiences of innovative farming practices. The Suffolk Show continues to do that, going from strength to strength, providing the opportunity for farmers to share knowledge and experience on the latest farming techniques as well as bring their livestock to show. But like shows across our county and country, the Suffolk Show has during the decades become much more than that, and crucially carries out an educational purpose for non-farmers like me, helping us understand the complexities and challenges of farming, and crucially, helping us better understand where our food comes from. The show achieves this through a whole array of displays, stands, activities, events and performances, as well as the central events involving the judging of livestock and horse-riding displays.

Like so much of our life in Suffolk, none of this would happen without dedicated staff and an army of volunteers, and their work for the show and the Suffolk School Farm and Country Fair has justifiably earned them the extraordinary honour of the King's Award for Voluntary Service. And it will be a special privilege and honour to welcome the Duke of Gloucester to the show and we are very grateful that he has chosen to attend this year, underlining once again the importance of this event for our county and beyond.

It is a fabulous day out for families and individuals, with far more on offer than you can possibly see or experience in a day or even two days – so do please come along!

Archdeacons' Articles of Enquiry: This year's Articles of Enquiry is being hosted on the online parish returns system, which may be accessed here: For any help in accessing it, including logins and passwords, please contact statistics@cofesuffolk.org. The deadline for completing this is Friday 30 August. The following is a statement from the archdeacons on this year's Articles, which focus on questions about your church's ministry with children under five years of age and their families.

Our ministry with children under five and their families is vital. Statistics show that 62% of people come to faith in Jesus before the age of 14 and a highly significant 38% before the age of 4. How we minister to these families in our communities really matters. Often, our ministry with the under-fives can be the crucial first step on a child's (and indeed their family's) journey to faith. We are conducting this research to better understand what is already happening with the under-fives in our diocese and how we can use this as a foundation for growth. We want to share learning and best practice and learn how we can help you develop this area of your ministry. The data we collect will help us to know what support and advice and resources you would value and start to develop these. *Talking Jesus report 2022. Evangelical Alliance.
